An Adult Christmas An Adult Christmas An Adult Christmas

Most people celebrate the Christmas of their children - the Christmas of the stores filled with toys and decorations. This is the Christmas of the colorful and engaging stories found in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke—with the singing angels, the surprised shepherds, the manger surrounded by animals, the reluctant inn keeper and the magi on camels loaded down with gold, frankincense and myrrh.

Although one can justify these stories as a suitable way of engaging children in the celebration of Christmas, this is not the Christmas intended by Matthew and Luke, who put the stories together. The stories of the Annunciation, the magi, the shepherds, the flight into Egypt and Jesus in the temple are ways of speaking about the whole of the gospel—that is of having meaning for all ages. Are the stories true? Yes, but in the way a poem is true. Are they strict history? No more than a poem is. Take for example Francis Thompson's famous poem The Hound of Heaven, in which God is in pursuit of a human who continually resists until finally giving in. God is depicted as a hound, a large dog, chasing the author of the poem until he can no longer resist and accepts God into his life.

The first verse goes like this:

I fled Him, down the nights and down the days;

I fled Him, down the arches of the year;

I fled Him, down the labyrinthine ways

Of my own mind; and in the midst of tears

I hid from Him, and under running laughter

Up vistaed hopes I sped;

And shot, precipitated,

A down Titanic glooms of chasmed fears,

*From those strong Feet that followed,
followed after.*

But with unhurrying chase,

And unperturbed pace,

Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,

They beat—and a Voice beat

More instant than the Feet—

“All things betray thee, who betrayest Me.”

*So, is God a large, long-eared hunting dog?
Of course not. Is God pursuing us by* continually offering us the grace of being in literally, physically true? No. Is it humanly communion with Him? Yes. Is the poem true? By all means. The poem is profoundly true in that it states colorfully something about the relations between God and ourselves.

Matthew and Luke instinctively felt that the Gospel of Mark, the first of the Gospels, was incomplete, beginning as it does with the public ministry of Jesus and his time in the desert. So they took Old Testament material and wove it into their stories of Jesus' birth, which they thought was a better beginning. The point is our faith is not based on the historical character of these narratives. In St. Paul, who wrote before the Gospels were composed, Jesus' identity is most closely tied to the resurrection; in the infancy narratives, Jesus' identity is tied to his beginnings, whatever may have been the facts surrounding his birth and early years.

Often the real meaning of Christmas is not well communicated through Christmas cards and carols. In fact the very imagery of the infancy narratives of the Gospels of Matthew and Luke can distract us. The lovely details of the brightly twinkling star, the exotically dressed wise men, the silent Bethlehem, and the distraught shepherds belong more to lore than to history. We know very little of what actually happened at the birth of Jesus Christ.

But historical factuality does not exhaust the meaning of this feast of Christmas. The truth of the Christian gospel is in the fact of Christ, not in his setting. The event of the birth of Christ is more important than the circumstances. In his God-humanity he shows us the meaning of our lives. He was a truly free person, and he acquired for us the insight of how to use our own freedom and courage to strive for freedom for others. He brings us freedom from personal blocks and biases, freedom for a more profound touching of our depths, freedom from so much that hinders change and vision, freedom to transform the imprisoning worlds of others.

Still, the Christmas trees, cards and carols with their vivid descriptions of the Christ-happening are wonderful. And we need their heartwarming pictorial beauty so that we can pass from fact to mystery. And mystery is what Christmas is all about: the sacrament of Jesus Christ. God has exposed Godself to us in the person of Jesus. Salvation comes not from on high but lives right here with us in our little, often fragmented and messy worlds. Jesus Christ is a marvelous exchange and the definitive sign of being a human being. It is Paul in his letter to Titus who tells us what this means for us as Christians. We have been saved, not for what we have done but for what God has done for us. We are saved through our putting on Christ in our baptism. The spirit that is lavished on us is Christ's own spirit, and because of that all human values become Christian if we bear witness to the coming of Christ. Because God has become human, our becoming more human is the epiphany of salvation.

Christmas means that whenever you accept this life—opening yourself simply, with trust, obediently and without protest to its ineffable meaning—you share in the glory of Christ. What we discover behind those Christmas card scenes is that when we grow in true self-love, we are filling out the person of Christ. When we free ourselves from narrowness and the fear of being threatened by change, we are transformed into Christ.
